PHILADELPHIA, October 17.

SIR,

INCLOSED I have the honour to present your Excellency a letter from Major Tallmadge, of the 2d regiment of light dragoons, with my congratulations on the success of the American arms, in the reduction of Fort Slongo, on Long-Island, the morning of the third instant.

The address and gallantry exhibited by Major Tallmadge, in planning the enterprize, and by Major Trescott, and the officers and men under his command, in the execution of it, do them much honour.

It is said a considerable number of arms were taken in the fort

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect,
Your Excellency's most obedient servant,
W. HEATH.

His Excellency THOMAS M'KEAN, Esq;
President of Congress.

Compo-Point, October 3, 1781.

DEAR GENERAL,

I AM happy in having occasion to congratulate you on the success of an enterprize against Fort Slongo, on Long-Island. After making many attempts to embark, and being prevented by bad weather, last evening at eight o'clock, I ordered 50 men from Capt. Richards's company of the Connecticut line, and 50 more from Capt. Edgar's dismounted dragoons, to embark at this place. The smallness of the garrison at Slongo and the difficulty of procuring boats, making it unnecessary to employ but a part of my detachment in this service, at the request of Major Trescott, he was honoured with the command. Having obtained several very accurate drafts of this post, and even the places where the centinels stood, I made every disposition for the attack, previous to the embarkation of the troops. I have inclosed a copy of my orders to Major Trescott, which he has most faithfully executed, and his return of prisoners, &c. &c. It becomes necessary for me to observe, that for the execution of this service, Captain Edgar's dismounted dragoons were ordered to surprize the garrison and carry the works, while Captain Richards, with his company, were to surround the fort, and prevent the garrison from escaping. Lieutenant Rogers, of the 2d regiment of light dragoons, with ten chosen men, was appointed to lead the attack against the fort, followed by Major Trescott and Captain Edgar, with the remainder of the dismounted dragoons, the rear of which was brought up by Cornet Pike; Captain Richards, Lieutenant Holt and Ensign Pinto, were disposed of as above observed, to surround the garrison. The attack commenced at three o'clock this morning, and was conducted with great good order, but notwithstanding the greatest exertions of Capt. Richards and his officers, some of the garrison jumped over the works and escaped. Major Trescott speaks highly of all the officers and soldiers under his command, as well as of the boatmen employed on this service. It was fortunate for Major Valanstine, who commanded the garrison, that he was absent at New-York.

It gives me peculiar satisfaction that I have occasion to report, not a man killed of our detachment, and but one wounded. After the troops have refreshed themselves, I shall forward the prisoners, together with the standard of the garrison, to Head-Quarters. The plunder that was brought off from the garrison, I presume may be divided among the troops and boatmen, who were on the expedition. The piece of brass artillery I shall annex to my command for the present.

Some of our baggage being left at Fairfield, and other reasons of a private nature, which I shall soon communicate, have induced me to march the detachment to Fairfield, from whence I shall write you again to-morrow.

I am, my dear General,
With every sentiment of esteem,
Your most obedient servant,
BEN. TALLMADGE, Maj. 2d reg. L. D.
Major General HEATH.

Return of Prisoners, Ordnance, Military Stores, &c. taken in Fort Slongo, October 3, 1781.

A considerable quantity of English goods and cloathing were taken in the fort and brought off.

LEM. TRESCOTT, Major 9th Mass. reg.

N. B. Two of the enemy were killed within their works, and two mortally wounded and left.

CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary.

Extract from GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Continental Village, October 5.

"THE General congratulates the army on the success of the American arms in the reduction of Fort Slongo, on Long Island, the morning of the 3d inst. This enterprise was planned by Major Tallmadge, and executed by Major Trescott, with an address and gallantry which does them great honour.

"The General presents his thanks to Major Tallmadge, Major Trescott, and the other brave officers and men, both soldiers and boatmen, who signalized themselves on this occasion. It adds much to the pleasure of this success, that it was obtained without the loss of a man killed on our side; and only one wounded. Of the enemy, two Captains, one Lieutenant, and eighteen rank and file were made prisoners, besides several killed and wounded. Two iron double fortified four-pounders, were destroyed: The colours of the fort, 1 brass three-pounder, and a number of small arms, ammunition, &c. are trophies of victory."

Oct. 7. Last evening the prisoners taken in Fort Slongo, with the colours of the garrison, were brought to Head-Quarters under proper escort, and the former are this day forwarded to Fish-Kill.

WHEREAS it hath been published in the papers of this city, that I the subscriber am a deserter from the armies of the United States of America, which publication is extremely injurious to my character. I therefore (through the same channel) inform the public, that I have a legal discharge, certified by the Hon. Thomas M'Kean, Esq; Chief Justice of the State of Pennsylvania.

This I apprehend will be fully sufficient to remove any prejudices, which the former publication might have created in the minds of the independent citizens of America, whose cause, when legally called upon, I shall ever consider it my duty to support.

KINGSTON (Jamaica) Auguſt 4.

On Wedneſday forenoon a ſevere ſtorm of wind, accompanied with heavy and inceſſant rain, came on here, and continued all that night, and a great part of the following day: The wind during that time veering from N. E. to S. E. It blew with ſuch violence during the night, that numbers of the ſhipping and ſmall craft in this harbour, and that of Port-Royal, were driven aſhore, and ſome of them irrecoverably loſt. From the hulks at the eaſt end of this town, to Paſſage Fort, not leſs than 90 veſſels of different ſizes are on ſhore, many of which have ſuſtained very conſiderable damage, but we have not been able to collect their names, much leſs to aſcertain the hurt received by each. Of the fleet at Port-Royal above 30 are on ſhore from Paſſage Fort to the Twelve Apoſtles; among them are the Green-Iſland, Watt; Carnatick, Gibbon; Mary, Frizwell; John, Watſon; Thetis, Hardy; Jamaica, late Grimſby; Mentor, Whiteſides; Kingſton, Hurſt; Orange Bay, Roſs; London, Peck; Henry, Logan; Montague, Caſey; Arundel, Mann; George and John, Dears; Chambers, Langley; Hope, Simes; Diſpatch, Towers; Friendſhip, Ronaldſon; Nancy, Brown; Fame, Eaton; True Briton, Stewart; Clarendon, Jordan; Lark, Backhouſe; and Ranſom, Bagnold. Some of them 'tis feared will never be got off, and others will not, without much trouble and damage

We are informed, that his Majeſty's ſhip Ulyſſes is arrived at Lucia, diſmalted, and having been obliged to throw the greateſt part of her guns over-board.

BOSTON, October 6.

Extract of a letter by Captain Newman, from a capital Houſe in Amſterdam.

"Our ſentiments perfectly coincide with yours, reſpecting the preſent ſtate of publick affairs; and as we have the ſame hopes, from the plan of the armed neutrality, which you have formed, we have no doubt of ſeeing them ſoon realized, and America hailed as independent through all the globe."

"The impolitic, unjuſt, and cruel conduct of England, have done more to deſtroy its power, than all its enemies. Every commercial power in Europe, whoſe flag has been wantonly and repeatedly inſulted, all unite in cruſhing thoſe haughty Iſlanders which 'ere long, we doubt not to ſee ſufficiently humbled, and compelled to give up claims, they would have been wiſe to have deſiſted from ſooner."

Much has been ſaid by the Britons and their partizans, againſt the national character of the French, they cannot however perſuade us not to credit our ſenſes. We have found the character of this nation directly the oppoſite of what our enemies have affected to repreſent it. We have found in France not only a faithful but a moſt generous ally. In the aid they have ſent us in ſpecie, in warlike ſtores, and in land and ſea forces, they have gone far beyond what their engagements with us encouraged us to expect, and have aſtoniſhed the world. It is a fact to be depended on, that His Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty has 10,000 land forces, and 35,000 men in the fleet, that are at this moment employed for the ſuccour of the United States. The manner in which this deciſive ſuperiority of force was ſent us, has been ſo ſure, and ſo unexpected by the enemy, as to demonſtrate the meaſures of the court of France, to be as politic as they are juſt and generous.

His Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty having ſeen fit to eſtabliſh an independent conſulſhip for the four eaſtern States, the Hon. Mons. de la Tombe, Conſul General of the ſame, arrived in this town from Philadelphia on Friday laſt, with his Vice-Conſul, to enter upon that important office.

FISH-KILL, October 4.

By recent accounts from the northward, we learn, a detachment of ſir John Johnſon's corps (about 250) arrived at St. John's, from Montreal, about the laſt of Auguſt, where it is probable they were joined by ſome other corps, Indians, &c. Captain Forbes, of the 34th regiment, who commands at St. John's, lately ſent a party towards Saratoga, to take a priſoner or two, for the purpoſe of obtaining intelligence; but notwithſtanding his very particular inſtructions, a copy of which is tranſmitted, on the morning of the 25th ult. a Captain Dunham of the militia, and two men only, took five of the party, and conducted them ſafe to Saratago, in a manner which does this little party much honour. Scouts are out in ſearch of the remainder.

The following is a Copy of the Inſtructions.

"SIR,

"YOU will proceed with your party to Saratoga, and bring me from thence one or more intelligent priſoners: You muſt be neceſſarily aware of the addreſs, activity and courage, required to conduct an enterprize of this nature, with honour to yourſelf and advantage to your cauſe.—You will carry in your mind, that the weaker your force, the ſtronger muſt be the ſhew and vigorous exertions of your courage: This will deceive your enemy, who will naturally multiply numbers when they ſee a party attack with confidence.—I have dwelt upon this point, as I have, for good reaſons, given you but a ſmall party.

"In caſe of being obſerved, before you have executed your buſineſs, and by the diſpoſition of the enemy precluded from a poſſibility of a retreat, you may ſhew them theſe orders, to evince that you are come openly and avowedly in arms, to do the duty you are commanded on: and not like lurking ſpies, or ſecret aſſaſſins, as ſuch are but too often, for the honor of war, ſent from the enemy into this province.

"Avoid even the ſhadow of cruelty, and every kind of miſchief unauthoriſed by the laws of war. The diſtreſſing of individuals is but a partial evil, and avails nothing. No deſtruction muſt be levied that will not affect the collective body of the enemy."

TRENTON, October 10.

Extract of a letter from New-Brunſwick, Oct. 7.

"On Friday night laſt Capt. Adam Hyler, from New-Brunſwick, with one gun boat and two whale ditto, within a quarter of a mile of the guard ſhip at Sandy-Hook, attacked five veſſels, and, after a ſmart conflict of 15 minutes, carried them; two of them were armed, one mounting four 6 pounders, and one ſix ſwivels and one 3 pounder. The hands made their eſcape with their long boats, and took refuge in a ſmall fort, in which was mounted twelve ſwivel guns; from which they kept up a conſtant firing, notwithſtanding which he boarded them all without the loſs of a man; on board of one of them was 250 buſhels of wheat, and a quantity of cheeſe, belonging to Capt. Lippincot, bound to New-York; he took from them 50 buſhels of wheat, a quantity of cheeſe, ſeveral ſwivels, a number of fuzees, one caſk of powder, and ſome dry goods, and ſtripped them of their ſails and rigging, not being able to bring the veſſels into port, in conſequence of a contrary tide and wind; after which he ſet all on fire ſave one, on board of which was a woman and four ſmall children, which prevented her from ſharing a ſimilar fate."

PHILADELPHIA, Octobr 17.

Extract of a private letter from a gentleman to his friend in this city, dated Camp before York-Town, October 5, 1781.

"You muſt before this time have heard of our ſafe arrival in Virginia, and our junction with the troops from count de Graſſe's fleet. On the 28th ultimo we marched from Williamſburgh, and made our appearance before the enemy's works at this place—On the 29th we encamped within leſs than a mile of their firſt chain of redoubts; and our movements indicating a ſtorm, they evacuated them the ſame night—On the 30th his excellency reconnoitered their ſecond line, and on the 1ſt of the current began a number of redoubts within the lines which they had evacuated. From that time to the preſent we have been employed in compleating thoſe works and making faſcines and gabions for further operations. We expect in two or three days, at fartheſt, to begin the ſiege with ardor, by breaking ground within leſs than 400 yards of their principal batteries. Since we began the redoubts they have kept up a continual cannonade upon us, without our taking ſo much notice of them as to return a ſingle ſhot, except from a few rifle men, and have killed only ſix of our men. The American troops compoſe the right wing of the army in the following order—Muhlenberg's and Hazen's brigades to form the diviſion on the right, under the marquis de la Fayette—Wayne's and the Maryland brigade the diviſion of the center, commanded by baron Steuben—Dayton's and Clinton's that on the left—General Lincoln commands the whole wing—Stephen's and Lawſon's brigades of Militia form the ſecond line.—His excellency count Rochambeau commands the left wing, and makes his own diſpoſition—The park of artillery and corps of ſappers and miners are poſted between the two lines. I ſend you an extract from the General Orders of yeſterday"

"Camp before York-Town, October 4, 1781.

The general congratulates the army on the brilliant ſucceſs of the allied troops near Gloſter. He requeſts the duke Lawzene to accept his particular thanks, for the judicious diſpoſition and deciſive vigor with which he charged the enemy, and to communicate his warmeſt acknowledgments to the gallant officers and men, by whom he was ſo admirably ſeconded; he feels peculiar ſatisfaction at the inconſiderable loſs on our part, that no ill effects are to be apprehended from the honourable wounds which have been received in this affair, and that at ſo ſmall an expence, the enemy, amounting to ſix hundred horſe and foot, were completely repulſed, and re-conducted to their very lines."

The corps of the allied army were the duke Lawzene's legion, and the militia grenadiers of Mercer.

The following is a liſt of our killed and wounded, and as far as can be gathered of the enemy's.

Duke Lawzene's legion, 3 huzzars killed.
Captains Billey, Dillon, and Deteſtor, with 11 huzzars wounded; the officers very ſlightly. 3 horſes killed and 4 wounded.

The enemy's loſs in killed and wounded, exceeds 50, including the commanding officer of the infantry killed, and lieutenant colonel Tarlton badly wounded.

Deſerters come into our camp every day, and we have certain accounts of the enemy's killing about 400 of their horſe and throwing them into York river."

Advices from Virginia, as late as the 5th inſtant, inform us that colonel Tarlton, at the head of a body of horſe and infantry, on the 3d inſtant made a ſally from Glouceſter, upon a party of our forces near that town; but the duke de Lauzene, who commanded our troops, gave them a very warm reception, as appears by the general orders of his excellency the Commander in Chief, inſerted above, to which our readers are referred.

Monday morning arrived here the privateer Fair American, captain Eldridge, from a cruize, and bro't with her the following veſſels:

The ſloop Polly, belonging to this port, laden with flour, bound to Cape Francois, taken by Britiſh cruiſers, but retaken by captain Eldridge;
Brig King George, from London;
Brig Ann, from London;
Brig Nancy, from London;
Brig York, from Newry.

Theſe laſt four veſſels ſailed from England about 12 weeks ſince, in company with near 90 ſail more, 25 of which bound to Charleſtown, and the remainder to New-York, about 40 ſail of which captain Eldridge ſaw, on Saturday laſt, go into Sandy Hook. The prizes will prove very valuable, as their cargoes conſiſt of a variety of articles, ſuch as cheeſe, butter, porter, beer, flour, ironmongery, dry goods, &c. &c.

A ſhip of 12 guns, from London, belonging to the above mentioned fleet, was a few days ago carried into Egg Harbour. She is laden with articles ſimilar to the other prizes, the loſs of which will be greatly felt by the enemy.

About two weeks ago one of the above prizes ſpoke with the homeward bound Jamaica fleet, in the Windward paſſage, which had ſuffered very much in a hard gale of wind. Thirty ſail of this fleet were ſtranded on what is called the Keys, and one of the convoy, a 90 gun ſhip, was among the number. this information was given by the people of the Ann to captain Eldridge.

Extract of a letter from Baltimore, dated October 13.

"A boat arrived this morning in three days from York, the buſineſs there has at length become ſerious. The people declare, that on Tueſday laſt a flag with ſome propoſitions was ſent by Cornwallis to Gen. Waſhington, which were immediately rejected. That a firing commenced, and one of the enemy's magazines was certainly blown up."

By accounts from Jerſey we learn, that about 40 ſail of ſtore-ſhips, &c. being the remainder of Admiral Digby's fleet, under convoy of three ſhips, ſome ſay frigates, others ſhips of the line, have arrived at New-York.

On Tueſday the 9th inſt. came on the General Election throughout the State, for Repreſentatives in Aſſembly, and other officers of Government, when the following Gentlemen were choſen,

Oct. 15. ¶ HENRY LEWIS.

PHILADELPHIA, October 17.

Yesterday morning arrived here, Captain PIERCE, Aid-de-Camp to General GREENE, with the following dispatches for his Excellency the President of Congress.

Head Quarters, Martin's Tavern, near Ferguson's Swamp South-Carolina, September 11, 1781.

SIR,

IN my dispatch of the 25th of August I informed your Excellency, that we were on our march for Friday's Ferry, to form a junction with the State troops and a body of militia collecting at that place, with an intention to make an attack upon the British army laying at Col. Thompson's, near M'Cord's Ferry. On the 27th, on our arrival near Friday's Ferry, I got intelligence that the enemy were retiring.

We crossed the river at Howell's Ferry, and took post at Motte's plantation. Here I got intelligence that the enemy had halted at the Eutaw Springs, about 40 miles below us; and that they had a reinforcement, and were making preparations to establish a permanent post there. To prevent this I determined rather to hazard an action, notwithstanding our numbers were greatly inferior to theirs. On the 5th we began our march, our baggage and stores having been ordered to Howell's Ferry under a proper guard. We moved by slow and easy marches, as well to disguise our real intention, as to give General Marion an opportunity to join us, who had been detached for the support of Col. Harding, a report of which I transmitted in my letter of the 5th, dated at Maybrick's Creek. General Marion joined us on the evening of the 7th, at Burdell's plantation, 7 miles from the enemy's camp.

We made the following disposition, and marched at 4 o'clock the next morning to attack the enemy. Our front line was composed of four small battalions of militia, two of North and two of South-Carolinians; one of the latter was under the immediate command of Gen. Marion, and was posted on the right, who also commanded the front line; the two North-Carolina battalions, under the command of Col. Malmady, were posted in the centre, and the other South-Carolina battalion, under the command of Gen. Pickens, was posted on the left. Our second line consisted of three small brigades of continental troops, one from North-Carolina, one from Virginia, and one from Maryland. The North-Carolinians were formed into three battalions, under the command of Lieut. Col. Ash, Majors Armstrong and Blount, the whole commanded by General Sumner, and posted upon the right. The Virginians consisted of two battalions commanded by Major Snead and Captain Edmonds, and the whole by Lieut. Col. Campbell, and posted in the center. The Marylanders also consisted of two battalions, commanded by Lieut. Col. Howard and Major Hardman, and the brigade by Col. Williams, Deputy Adjutant General to the army, and were posted upon the left. Lieut. Col. Lee with his Legion covered our right flank, and Lieut. Col. Henderson with the State troops, commanded by Lieut. Cols. Hampton, Middleton and Polk, our left. Lieut. Col. Washington with his horse, and the Delaware troops under Capt. Kirkwood, formed a corps de reserve. Two three pounders under Capt. Lieut. Gaines, advanced with the front line, and two fixes under Capt. Browne with the second.

The Legion and State troops formed our advance, and were to retire upon the flanks upon the enemy's forming. In this order we moved on to the attack. The Legion and State troops fell in with a party of the enemy's horse and foot about four miles from their camp, who mistaking our people for a party of militia charged them briskly, but were soon convinced of their mistake by the reception they met with, the infantry of the State troops kept up a heavy fire, and the Legion in front under Captain Rudolph charged them with fixed bayonets, they fled on all sides, leaving four or five dead on the ground, and several more wounded. As this was supposed to be the advance of the British army, our front line was ordered to form and move on briskly in line, the Legion and State troops to take their position upon the flanks. All the country is covered with timber from the place the action began to the Eutaw Springs. The firing began again between two and three miles from the British camp. The militia were ordered to keep advancing as they fired. The enemy's advanced parties were soon driven in, and a most tremendous fire began on both sides from right to left, and the legion and state troops were closely engaged. General Marion, Col. Malmady and Gen. Pickens conducted the troops with great gallantry and good conduct, and the militia fought with a degree of spirit and firmness that reflects the highest honour on this class of soldiers. But the enemy's fire being greatly superior to ours, and continuing to advance, the militia began to give ground. The North-Carolina brigade under Gen. Sumner was ordered up to their support. These were all new levies, and had been under discipline little more than a month; notwithstanding which they fought with a degree of obstinacy that would do honour to the best of veterans; and I could hardly tell which to admire most, the gallantry of the officers, or the bravery of the troops. They kept up a heavy and well-directed fire, and the enemy returned it with equal spirit, for they really fought worthy of a better cause, and great execution was done on both sides. In this stage of the action the Virginians under Lieut. Col. Campbell, and the Maryland troops under Col. Williams, were led on to a brisk charge with trailed arms, through a heavy cannonade and a shower of musquet balls. Nothing could exceed the gallantry and firmness of both officers and soldiers upon this occasion----they preserved their order, and pushed on with such unshaken resolution, that they bore down all before them. The enemy were routed in all quarters. Lieut. Col. Lee had with great address, gallantry and good conduct, turned the enemy's left flank, and was charging them in rear at the same time the Virginia and Maryland troops were charging them in front. A most valuable officer Lieut. Col. Henderson got wounded early in the action, and Lieut. Col. Hampton, who commanded the State cavalry, and who fortunately succeeded Lieut. Col. Henderson in command, charged a party of the enemy, and took upwards of 100 prisoners.

Lieut. Col. Washington brought up the corps de reserve upon the left, where the enemy seemed disposed to make further resistance, and charged them so briskly with the cavalry and Captain Kirkwood's infantry, as gave them no time to rally or form.

Lieutenant-Colonels Polk and Middleton, who commanded the State infantry, were no less conspicuous for their good conduct than their intrepidity; and the troops under their command gave specimens of what may be expected from men naturally brave, when improved by proper discipline.

Captain-Lieutenant Gaines, who commanded the three-pounders with the front line, did great execution, until his pieces were dismounted.

We kept close at the enemy's heels after they broke, until we got into their camp, and a great number of prisoners were continually falling into our hands, and some hundreds of the fugitives ran off towards Charlestown. But a party threw themselves into a three-story brick house which stands near the spring; others took post in a picquetted garden, and in the impenetrable shrubs; and the rear also being secured by the springs and deep hollow ways, the enemy renewed the action.

Every exertion was made to dislodge them: Lieut. Col. Washington made most astonishing efforts to get through the thicket to charge the enemy in the rear, but found it impracticable, had his horse shot under him, and was wounded and taken prisoner.

Four six-pounders were ordered up before the house, two of our own, and two of the enemy's which they had abandoned; and they were pushed on so much under the command of the fire from the house and the party in the thickets, as rendered it impracticable to bring them off again when the troops were ordered to retire. Never were pieces better served, most of the men and officers were either killed or wounded.

Washington failing in his charge upon the left, and the legion baffled in an attempt upon the right, and finding our infantry galled by the fire of the enemy, and our ammunition mostly consumed, though officers and men continued to exhibit uncommon acts of heroism, I thought proper to retire out of the fire of the house, and draw up the troops at a little distance from the woods, not thinking it adviseable to push our advantages further, being persuaded the enemy could not hold the post many hours, and that our chance to attack them on the retreat was better than a second attempt to dislodge them, in which, if we succeeded, it must be attended with considerable loss.

We collected all our wounded, except such as were under the command of the fire of the house, and retired to the ground from which we marched in the morning, there being no water nearer, and the troops ready to faint with the heat and want of refreshment, the action having continued near four hours. I left on the field of action a strong picquet, and early in the morning detached Gen. Marion, and Lieut. Colonel Lee with the legion horse between Eutaw and Charlestown, to prevent any reinforcements from coming to the relief of the enemy, and also to retard their march should they attempt to retire, and give time for the army to fall upon their rear, and put a finishing stroke to our successes. We left two pieces of our artillery in the hands of the enemy, and brought off one of theirs.

On the evening of the 9th the enemy retired, leaving upwards of 70 of their wounded behind them, and not less than a 1000 stand of arms that were picked up on the field, and found broke and concealed in the Eutaw springs. They stove between 20 and 30 puncheons of rum, and destroyed a great variety of other stores which they had not carriages to carry off. We pursued them the moment we got intelligence of their retiring. But they formed a junction with Major M'Arthur at this place, Gen. Marion and Lieut. Col. Lee not having a force sufficient to prevent it. But on our approach they retired to the neighbourhood of Charlestown. We have taken 500 prisoners, including the wounded the enemy left behind; and I think they cannot have suffered less than 600 more in killed and wounded. The fugitives that fled from the field of battle spread such an alarm that the enemy burnt their stores at Dorchester, and abandoned the post at Fair Lawn, and a great number of negroes and others were employed in falling trees across the road for some miles without the gates of Charlestown. Nothing but the brick house, and the peculiar strength of the position at Eutaw, saved the remains of the British army from being all made prisoners.

We pursued them as far as this place, but not being able to overtake them we shall halt a day or two to refresh, and then take our old position on the high hills of Santee. I think myself principally indebted for the victory we obtained to the free use of the bayonet made by the Virginians and Marylanders, the infantry of the legion, and Capt. Kirkwood's light infantry; and tho' few armies ever exhibited equal bravery with ours in general, yet the conduct and intrepidity of these corps were peculiarly conspicuous. Lieut. Col. Campbell fell as he was leading his troops to the charge, and tho' he fell with distinguished marks of honour, yet his loss is much to be regretted: He was the great soldier and the firm patriot.

Our loss in officers is considerably more from their value than their number, for never did either men or officers offer their blood more willingly in the service of their country. I cannot help acknowledging my obligations to Col. Williams for his great activity on this and many other occasions in forming the army, and for his uncommon intrepidity in leading on the Maryland troops to the charge, which exceeded any thing I ever saw. I also feel myself greatly indebted to Captains Pierce and Pendleton, Major Hyrne and Capt. Shubrick, my Aids de Camp, for their activity and good conduct throughout the whole of the action.

This dispatch will be handed to your Excellency by Capt Pierce, to whom I beg leave to refer you for further particulars. I have the honour to be, with great respect,

Your Excellency's most obedient, and most humble servant,

NATHANIEL GREENE.
